think pink

the clothes at the fall yves saint laurent show may have been inspired by nuns, but the makeup was like a whole new religion.

future

new year's eve is an excuse to stay out till sunrise, sing a song you don't know the lyrics to, and kiss a stranger. sound like a typical tuesday? all the more reason to change up your look. we asked beauty gurus for hair tricks, makeup tips, and how to be sure you still look great when you wash it all off.

SHINE ON

I like to put on a highlighting product before blush so it gives me a guide and I see where the color is. It goes on the high planes of the face, the bridge of the nose, a little bit on the brow bone, the cheekbone, and the bow of the mouth. You can mix it with your moisturizer to dial it down if you're not a girl that's used to wearing shimmer, or mix it with your foundation to give it a little bit of a tint, or wear it alone. You know when you've overdone it when it overtakes the color. That really nice shine on the cheekbone here is from the gorgeous NARS Sex Appeal blush, which I'm obsessed with—it goes with everybody's skin tone, it's like a foolproof color that you can just put on the apples of the cheeks, and it gives you that really healthy glow, which I love. Think of shimmer as jewelry for the face.

francelle daly

New Orleans native Francelle Daly has been obsessed with makeup since she was 10, when her mother (also a makeup artist named Francelle) bought her some lip gloss. Daly, who was recently named national makeup artist for NARS Cosmetics, has a varied skill set to say the least—a shoot with Ryan McGinley once had her using grass and mud for makeup, but she's also glammed up the faces of Christina Ricci and Karen Elson. Now it's your turn: Daly created the three looks on these pages for you to try at home.
